

Plenary #1

Realizing the Potential of Integrating Opioid Use Disorder Treatment into Correctional Systems

Monday, 10/30/17

10:00 A.M. - 11:30 A.M.

Ingrid Binswanger, MD, MPH, Internal Medicine Associate, received her medical training at the University of California, Berkeley/University of California San Francisco Joint Medical Program. She completed her residency at UCSF and completed fellowship in the Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholars Program at the University of Washington before joining the University of Colorado in 2006. Currently she is Director of the Primary Care Research Fellowship and the Patient-Centered Outcomes Research (PCOR) Scholars Program.

Joshua D. Lee MD, MSc, is an Associate Professor of Population Health and Medicine/General Internal Medicine and Clinical Innovation at the NYU School of Medicine. He is a clinician researcher focused on addiction pharmacotherapies, and is Director of the NYU ABAM Fellowship in Addiction Medicine.

His research models the use of addiction pharmacotherapies in primary care as and criminal justice populations. He has conducted multiple NIH and other clinical trials examining the use of extended-release naltrexone and buprenorphine opioid treatments in outpatient criminal justice involved-adults, in soon-to-be released jail inmates, and in community detox settings. Research on extended-release naltrexone for alcohol treatment has focused on primary care medical management.

Lara Strick, MD, MSc, the statewide infectious disease physician for the Washington State Department of Corrections, Clinical Assistant Professor in the Department of Medicine at the University of Washington, and physician at the Madison Clinic (Ryan White funded HIV clinic) at Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, has been working as an HIV provider in the correctional setting since 2004. Dr. Strick contributed to the recently published CDC Guidelines on HIV Testing in the Correctional Setting, and is the corrections program director at the NW AIDS Education and Training Center.

Plenary #2

A Multi-Systems Approach to Addressing the Opiate Epidemic: Perspectives on King County's Opiate Task Force

Monday, 10/30/17

3:30 P.M. - 5:00 P.M.

Brad Finegood is an Assistant Division Director in the Behavioral Health and Recovery Division in King County. In this role he recently served as a co-chair of the King County Heroin and Prescription Opiate Task Force. He received his Bachelor's Degree from Michigan State University and his Master's Degree in Community Agency Counseling with a specialty in Alcohol and Drug Abuse from Western Michigan University. He has worked in the behavioral health field for 20 years in both substance use disorder and mental health administration. He has provided direct service in multiple modalities including prevention, outpatient, residential and Medication Assisted Treatment, both in institutions and the community. Most importantly he is the sibling and survivor of a younger sibling that passed away of an overdose.

Thea Oliphant-Wells is in long term recovery from opioid use disorder and has personal experiences with homelessness and criminal justice involvement. She is a social worker and harm reductionist. Since completing her master's in social work at the University of Washington in 2012 she has been working with people with behavioral health conditions in harm reduction programs. She has most recently been a part of the King County Heroin and Opiate Addiction Task Force and has been working on systems level advocacy for the last two years, while working as a social worker for King County's Public Health Needle Exchange program. Thea did her undergraduate practicum with the Department of Corrections at Mission Creek Corrections Center for women, where she supported women offenders with re-entry planning, access to resources, and connection with mentors. She volunteered there for 4 years prior to that working with women with substance use disorders and considers working with justice involved people a passion of hers.

Dan Satterberg has served in the King County Prosecuting Attorney's Office for more than three decades, and was first elected to lead the office in November 2007. The KCPAO has 236 attorneys and a total staff of more than 500 who serve the 13th largest county in the United States.

Dan is committed to the reform of the Criminal Justice system through partnership with the communities most impacted by crime. Together with community partners, Dan has created successful programs that keep young people engaged in school and divert youth from the courtroom including a motivational intervention called "The 180 Program." His office has also partnered to establish diversion programs to help families with juvenile domestic violence, and to explore the potential of restorative justice to address youth violence. The KCPAO is a founding partner in the creation of LEAD (Law Enforcement Assisted Diversion), a national model creating a compassionate response to drug-addicted people, and giving police additional tools for responding to people with addiction and mental health issues. Dan is currently the Co-Chair of the Washington State Reentry Council.

Plenary #3

Why a Job is Not Enough:

Addressing Employment Needs of People with Criminal Records Holistically

Tuesday, 10/31/17

8:15 A.M. - 9:45 A.M.

Nancy G. La Vigne, PhD, is Director of the Justice Policy Center at the Urban Institute. She publishes research on prisoner reentry, criminal justice technologies, crime prevention, policing, and the spatial analysis of crime and criminal behavior. Her work appears in scholarly journals and practitioner publications and has made her a sought-after spokesperson on related subjects.

Before being appointed director, La Vigne was a senior research associate at Urban, directing groundbreaking research on prisoner reentry. Before joining Urban, La Vigne was founding director of the Crime Mapping Research Center at the National Institute of Justice. She later was special assistant to the assistant attorney general for the Office of Justice Programs within the US Department of Justice. She has also been research director for the Texas sentencing commission, research fellow at the Police Executive Research Forum, and consultant to the National Council on Crime and Delinquency. La Vigne was executive director for the bipartisan Charles Colson Task Force on Federal Corrections Reform. She chairs the board of the Crime and Justice Research Alliance and serves on the board for the Consortium of Social Science Associations. She testifies before Congress on prisoner reentry and criminal justice reform and has been featured on NPR and in the Atlantic, New York Times, Washington Post, and Chicago Tribune. La Vigne holds a BA in government and economics from Smith College, an MA in public affairs from the LBJ School at the University of Texas at Austin, and a PhD in criminal justice from Rutgers University.

Plenary #4
Reducing Recidivism and Homelessness:
Centering Prisoner Reentry within Safe, Secure, and Affordable Housing
Tuesday, 10/31/17
1:30 P.M. - 3:00 P.M.

Faith E. Lutze, PhD, is Professor and Graduate Director in the Department of Criminal Justice and Criminology at Washington State University, and serves as Vice President of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. Her current research interests include community corrections, homelessness and reentry, correctional industries and offender employment, incarcerated veterans with traumatic brain injury, drug courts, and gender and justice with an emphasis on masculinity.

Professor Lutze is the author of the book, The Professional Lives of Community Corrections Officers: The Invisible Side of Reentry (2014) and has published the results of her research in various journals including Criminal Justice and Behavior, Justice Quarterly, Crime & Delinquency, Criminology and Public Policy, Journal of Offender Rehabilitation, and the Journal of Criminal Justice. She teaches courses on gender and justice, violence toward women, and corrections. She is active in the community supporting violence prevention programs, promoting equality, and serving her rural community as an emergency medical technician.

Plenary #5
Stepping Up:
Using Data-Driven Public Management to Fix the Mental Health Crisis in Jails
Wednesday, 11/1/17
8:30 A.M. - 10:00 A.M.

Richard Cho is a nationally recognized expert on the intersection of homelessness and criminal justice system involvement, and on the intersection of health care and housing. Before joining the Justice Center, he served as deputy director of the United States Interagency Council on Homelessness (USICH), the agency that leads the federal government's response to homelessness. Prior to his time at USICH, Mr. Cho served as the director of Innovations and Research at the Corporation for Supportive Housing. He advised the City and State of New York in the design and implementation of the $1 billion New York/New York III Supportive Housing Initiative. He also helped guide the implementation of New York City's Housing First program for people with active substance use disorders. Mr. Cho has a BA from the University of Chicago, an MA in city planning from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and is completing a PhD in public administration at New York University.